POULTRY AND BEES

BATH FOR THE DUCKS.

It May Be Used on a Lot Without Sewer Connection, and Is Cheap to Make.

First, take an old barrel and knock out the bottom. Dig a hole five feet deep and put the open end of the barrel down. Then make the box to suit yourself, but mine is four by six feet and a foot high. Cut a one and one-half inch hole in the middle of the bottom and then get two one and one-half inch flanges and two pieces of one and one-half inch pipe, one piece being 14 inches long and the other ten inches. Take the longer piece and a flange and screw them together and then screw to the bottom of the box. Then put about a foot of earth on top of the barrel and set your box down in the ground so that the top is even with the surface of the ground. Screw a flange on the inside of the box over the hole, the same as the other, and screw the ten-inch piece of pipe in so that you can unscrew it to let out the water in order to clean the box. Run the inlet pipe marked "B" as near to the hydrant or source of water supply as possible, so that a hose can be attached and the water allowed to run in for 15 to 20 minutes each day, so that the box will be filled with clear water.

THE FINDING OF HONEY.

A Question That Has Engaged the Attention of Learned Jurists for a Long Time.

Writing on laws relating to the finding of honey, R. D. Fisher in Gleanings says: There was a sort of code among bee-hunters in the earlier days of this country, and is said to have been generally observed. It was to the effect that when a bee tree was located and marked with the initials of the finder, his rights were prima facie, and zealously observed. But this code did not hold good in law, especially against those holding an interest in the land.

"If a person finds a bee-tree containing honey, or a hive of bees on another's land, and marks it at once with his initials, he does not reclaim the bees and vest the exclusive property of the bees or honey in himself, as against one of the heirs having an interest in the land; nor does he acquire the right to bring in the courts the usual action of trespass against the heir for cutting down the tree and carrying away the bees and honey," says the New York supreme court in the case of Gillet vs. Mason.

An early and noted case is reported in 1 (Root) Conn. Goodwin sued Merrill for cutting down a tree in the forest that had a swarm of bees in it, and taking the honey which he (Goodwin) had previously discovered. Merrill pleaded that said bees were a swarm from his hive; that he had frequently "lured" them to near said tree, and that said bees were his property. The plaintiff replied that he found them wild in the woods, and had a good right to take them. The trial court gave the plaintiff judgment of 30 shillings damages.

The supreme court reversed this judgment, and said: "A man's finding bees in a tree standing upon another man's land gives him no right either to the tree or bees; and a swarm of bees going from a hive, if they can be followed and known, are not lost to the owner, but may be reclaimed."

As early as 1804 the New Hampshire supreme court held that one who finds a swarm of bees in a tree on another's land, marks the tree with his initials, and notifies the land owner, cannot maintain trover against the land owner for the bees and honey which he obtained and converted to his own use by felling the tree.

The Selection of Pullets.
As your young stock grows, select from all the broods the very finest, strongest and most vigorous pullets to keep for winter layers. Size, strength and vigor have so much to do with egg production that one should study this continually in the flock and train the eye to see the best egg producers while yet undeveloped. Save all such for your own use; never part with them unless you have more than you need. After they are selected keep them well under your own eye and select from all these the very best egg producers to lay the eggs from which you will grow your future stock, and gradually you will gain in egg production. The best hens are the ones that lay the largest number of eggs that are of fair size, good form and nicely finished. Such eggs sell the best, usually produce the best and have the best value in the market.—Faithers.

SECRET OF SUCCESS.

Poultry Business Not Suitable for Those Occupied with a Variety of Other Things.

Success with poultry is only obtained by the utmost care and watchfulness. A crop of wheat after the seed is sown requires no attention until harvest. Corn demands considerable cultivation, but there comes a time when that, too, can be laid by. But the cows and the poultry must be cared for every day, from the beginning of the year until its end. And of the two I think poultry requires the more unremitting care.

How foolish, then, for the man who has had little success in general farming to rush into poultry raising on a large scale because he reads in the poultry books or papers that there is money in it. Perhaps, too, his wife, by giving a small flock the care it requires has done well with a few hens. But let no man think he is going to get easy money out of hens. If given proper attention they will pay a profit, and so will most other farm animals and crops. Of course, there is no much hard labor required as in some other branches of farm work, but it is work, nevertheless. A farmer who has a liking for poultry will be more likely to give a flock the food and care they need than another, and such a man during the winter months, when he has little else to do, might be able to make a good profit on his fowls. But it must be remembered that they will also require attention in the spring and summer when other work presses.

Spring, too, is the time when most of the hatching is done. To have good winter layers one must have early hatched chicks; to have these one must in most cases raise them himself. A farmer who is busy on the land is not likely to spend his noons and evenings looking for head lice or in taking precautions against rats and other chicken enemies. Yet this must all be done or many of the chicks will never reach maturity.

If a farmer has a family of daughters, or a son whose time is not fully occupied, and who will give the poultry due attention, it will be all right to increase the size of the flock. A large majority of men will not give poultry the care they should have. Most women would do so, and the attention in small details, the "fussing" which makes the difference between success and failure in poultry raising, is far more characteristic of the average woman than the man. A woman will watch the little chicks more closely than with the mother hen; she will apply grease to their heads or change the feed at the first sign of drooping. If the fowls show symptoms of scaly leg, she will have them dipped in kerosene at the first appearance of the disease—but the scaly leg is a filthy disease not likely to appear in a woman's flock, unless brought there by purchased fowls from some "mere man." If a fowl becomes crooked, and she will have the crop opened, sewn up again, and the fowl will be well before the ordinary man would know there was anything the matter.

So turn the flock over to the women folks, if they have not already all the work they should do. Let them have, of course, the gross receipts from the poultry, and they will soon be buying incubators and other up-to-date appliances, and thus the farm poultry business may increase in a natural and profitable manner.—*N. up a good bank of earth. Lay a sill in cement on the top of the wall and set the rafters on this. Make the floor of cement and carry this up on to the rear wall a little way. Where flat rocks are abundant such a house can be built very cheaply.—Farm Journal.

POULTRY PARAGRAPHS.

A lazy man would make a poor poultryman.

Two small poultry runs are better than one large one.

Keep plenty of grit where the fowls can have access to it.

The best way to cure sickness among the hens is to prevent it.

Better not keep the male birds with the females during the moulting season.

Any fowls that are not to be carried through the winter should be sold now.

The smaller and more crowded the poultry quarters, the cleaner they must be kept.

Do not fall into the common error of thinking the poultry business can be mastered in a day.

The Ontario station has demonstrated that wheat and bran make a whiter flesh and corn a yellower one.

There is mighty little sickness among fowls which are properly housed and given the right kind of feed and attention.—Commercial Poultry.

WOMAN SAVES TRAIN

Her Cool Nerve at a Trying Moment Prevents Disaster.

Assisted in Her Heroic Effort by a Telephone and a Man with a Bicycle—How She Found the Danger.

A San Rafael (Cal.) correspondent writes that the cool nerve of a plucky woman and the speed of a man riding for life on a bicycle was all that saved the Ukiah express, bound from Ukiah to Tiburon on the line of the California Northwestern railway, from destruction late the other afternoon. Mrs. James Cochrane, wife of a well-known San Rafael attorney, was the heroine of the incident, and to her courage scores of passengers on the endangered train owe their lives.

On that afternoon a storm of wind swept over San Rafael. Near the outskirts of town and close to the residence of Mrs. Cochrane a huge eucalyptus tree, fully 100 feet in height, and two feet in diameter in its thickest part, was blown over so that the heavy portion of its trunk lay squarely across the tracks of the California Northwestern railway. Shortly after five o'clock Mrs. Cochrane, with a team of horses, started on a drive into the country. She passed close to the track in her carriage and saw the big tree lying across the rails. Suddenly the thought struck her that the Ukiah express was about due. She looked at her watch and it read 5:10 o'clock. A feeling of dread passed over her as she realized that the quick moving train with its long string of passenger cars was due at 5:15 o'clock.

Hurriedly jumping from her carriage, she ran down the track, hoping to flag the train. Then the full peril of the situation dawned upon her. The tree had fallen just at the end of a curve, which would itself about a tall hill. At the beginning of the curve the track emerged from a tunnel, and it was evident that the engineer in his cab would not be aware of his danger until he was right upon it.

"IT WAS A CLOSE SHAVE."

Mrs. Cochrane confesses that she grew sick with fear and the thought came to her that the engineer emerging suddenly from the tunnel would not understand her signal till too late. Then she remembered the telephone, and, turning back ran over the rough ground toward the house, where a line was installed. Once she stumbled, but the distance was short and in less than two minutes she was ringing for the railway depot. Train Dispatcher Force answered her message. All that he heard was: "Across the track near the tunnel; hurry; a train is coming."

Outside the station G. E. Gilbride, the baggage master, who is an expert bicycle rider, was standing. Force called to him the message, and with a jump Gilbride had seized his bicycle and was off. Force threw him a signal flag as he started and yelled a string of orders after him as he spurred down the street. The distance was only about a mile and the bicyclist rode like the wind. After he had gone a block he heard the shrill whistle of the coming train as it approached the tunnel. It was a race of man against a train with a hundred lives depending on the result. Gilbride reached the fallen tree, jumped from his bicycle, ran down the track away to the mouth of the tunnel, and as the engine emerged from the darkness flashed his red signal flag before the startled engineer. The whistles screamed "Brakes down," and with the engine shivering with the exertion, the train came to a stop with the nose of the locomotive's cow-catcher scarcely two feet from the fallen tree. Engineer Lewis, his face white from the peril, jumped from the cab and hurried to the signalman.

"It was a close shave," he gasped, and as the questioning passengers and Conductor Crane pressed around him he could only repeat: "It was a close shave, a close shave."

Pretty soon a half hysterical woman came down the track. It was Mrs. Cochrane and she told of the finding of the danger. The crew and passengers thanked her over and over again.

Snails Delight in Mistle.
A German scientist recently pointed out that snails were able to draw immense weights, and now a French naturalist claims that there are few, if any, animals which have a higher appreciation of music than snails. Place some snails on a pane of glass, he says, and you will find that, as they move over it they will make musical sounds similar to those which a person can produce by wetting his finger and then rubbing it around a glass tumbler. Complete airs, he points out, have been played on tumblers in this way, and he expresses the opinion that quite as good results can be obtained by using snails instead of fingers.
